Abstract

Internet banking has attracted the attention of banks, securities trading firms, brokerage houses, insurance companies, regulators and lawmakers in developing nations since the late 1990s. The digital revolution has undoubtedly changed almost every aspect of daily life as we stepped into the twenty-first century. Technological developments in the banking sector have speeded up communication and transactions for clients. Still, the concept of internet banking is a fairly new one to Indian consumers as compared to its developed counterparts. The present paper attempts to understand the concept of internet banking as well as study the benefits of internet banking from the perspective of consumers as well as banks. Internet banking is one of the technologies which is fastest fastest-growing banking practices nowadays. It is defined as the provision of information or services by a bank to its customers over the internet. It is viewed as a supplemental channel used in conjunction with other channels to provide the convenience of banking anytime from one's home or work, without having to incur some of the costs associated with a branch visit like going to the branch or waiting on line. Online banking eliminates physical and geographic boundaries and time limitations of banking services. Also as compared with traditional banking labor is replaced by machine very significantly which is low in cost and is available easily 24/7. E-banking services first emerged in the early 1990's, when credit card, ATM, and telephone banking services were three major applications.

2. To study the opportunities available in E-banking.
3. To have an overview whether electronic banking is profitable from every aspect or not.
4. To examine whether infrastructural facilities has an impact on electronic banking usage.

Banking Industry and Online Awareness of its Stakeholders

A large chunk of the Indian banking industry still belongs to the public sector banks having the most extensive network of physical branches. These are followed by large private banks lastly by multinational banks (MNC) who have the smallest physical network and therefore their online banking needs to be the most developed and able to address user needs without requiring human intervention. Electronic banking is one of the truly widespread avatars of E-commerce the world over. In simple words, e-banking implies provision of banking products and services through electronic delivery channels. "E-Banking denotes the provision of banking and related service through Extensive use of information technology without direct recourse to the bank by the customer."

Need of Internet Banking

1. Simplicity

Users and non-users expect online banking to be further simplified than what they see today. Some expectations: • Better link label clarity suggestive of action required • Better navigation that highlights and presents relevant information in context and at the right time needed • Better content partitioning according to popularity and priority of action

2. Security

Non-transactors and non-users reported that they did not transact online because: • concerns about the security of their banking information is not fully addressed • technical glitches and unreliability create confusion and anxiety • additional security gateways were absent

3. Service

Almost all transactors demanded better service. They wanted: • More services to be available online • Better and faster customer support channels like online chat to solve banking hurdles • Innovative and intuitive interface Banking is a task-focused activity and also deals with people's money. Both need ease of use and psychological comfort of the user as fundamental requirements, for example, giving feedback like 'your money will be transferred in 24 hours'. It specifically needs a clear task flow, clarity of language and terminology and support available at all times.

Challenges in E-Banking

Security Risk

The problem related to the security has become one of the major concerns for banks. A large group of customers refuses to opt for e-banking facilities due to uncertainty and security concerns.

The Trust Factor

Trust is the biggest problem to online banking for most of the customers. Conventional banking is preferred by the customers because of lack of trust on the online security. They have a perception that online transaction is risky due to which frauds can take place.

Customer Awareness

use, benefits and facility of internet banking. Less awareness of new technologies and their benefits is among one of the most ranked barrier in the development of e-banking.

Opportunities in E-Banking

Untapped Rural Markets

Contributing to 70% of the total population in India is a largely untapped market for banking sector. In all urban areas banking services entered but only few big villages have the banks entered. So that the banks must reach in remaining all villages because majority of Indian still living in rural areas.

Multiple Channels

Banks can offer so many channels to access their banking and other services such as ATM, Local branches, Telephone/mobile banking, video banking etc. to increase the banking business. Competitive Advantage: The benefit of adopting e-banking provides a competitive advantage to the banks over other players. The implementation of e-banking is beneficial for bank in many ways as it reduces cost to banks, improves customer relation, increases the geographical reach of the bank, etc. The benefits of e-banking have become opportunities for the banks to manage their banking business in a better way.

Internet Banking

It is clear that online finance will pickup and there will be increasing convergence in terms of product offerings banking services, share trading, insurance, loans, based on the data warehousing and data mining technologies. Anytime anywhere banking will become common and will have to upscale, such up scaling could include banks launching separate internet banking services apart from traditional banking services.

Conclusion

With the time, the concept of internet banking has got attention in the Indian context. Most of the banks have already implemented the e-banking facilities, as these facilities are beneficial to both i.e. banks as well as consumers. But the adoption of e-banking by the consumers is still at the early stage due to various challenges. The challenges such as security risk, privacy risk, trust factor and less awareness among consumers about e-banking are acting as hurdle in the adoption of e-banking facilities. Considering the challenges and risk related to e-banking, the Government of India along with various government agencies is making an effort to make e-banking more safe, secure and reliable. The banks can focus on strategic consumer groups to maximize its revenues from Internet banking. The experiences of the global economics suggest that banks cannot avoid the Internet banking phenomenon, but to gain a competitive advantage, they must structure their business models to suit to Indian conditions. Satisfied customers are central to optimal performance and greater financial returns.
